Obligations Case Notes

1. Table of Contents

| 1. Table of Contents                |    |
|-------------------------------------|----|
| 2. Agreement                        | 2  |
| 3. Consideration                    |    |
| 4. Certainty                        | 7  |
| 5. Intention                        |    |
| 6. Formalities                      | 13 |
| 7. Capacity                         | 14 |
| 8. Property                         | 14 |
| 9. Privity                          | 15 |
| 10. Misleading or deceptive conduct | 16 |
| 11. Estoppel                        | 20 |
| 12. Restitution                     | 22 |

2. Agreement

| Gibson v Manchester City Council – House of Lords |  |
|---|--|
| Issue   | Distinguish invitation to treat from offer                           |
| Facts   | Conservative Party had a scheme where tenants of council houses      |
|   | could purchase their homes. Gibson receives in mail an alleged offer |
|   | form, which he fills out and accepts. Manchester then says the offer |
|   | was no longer valid.   |
| Held  | This was an invitation to treat rather than an offer                 |
| Reasoning   | Weak wording in 'may be prepared to sell' – not a formal contract    |
|   | It is an invitation to make an application to buy                    |
| Ratio   | A brochure than invites an application is not an offer               |

| Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Company – English and Wales Court of Appeal |  |
|---|--|
| Issue   | Acceptance by performance in unilateral contracts                  |
| Facts   | Carbolic promised 100 pounds to anyone who used their smoke balls  |
|   | according to instruction, and nonetheless caught influenza. The    |
|   | advert stated the company deposited 1,000 pounds into a bank       |
|   | account to demonstrate their seriousness. Carlill saw the advert,  |
|   | used the ball as directed, but still caught influenza. The company |
|   | refused to pay, denying that there was an enforceable contract.    |
| Held  | This was an enforceable contract                                   |
| Reasoning   | Express promise was binding because there was a deposit and        |
|   | consideration was exchanged  |
|   | This was an open contract – offer made to anyone who performed     |
|   | the condition  |
| Ratio   | A contract can be binding if one party makes an offer to the world |
|   | and another party accepts it by performance                        |

| Mobil Oil Australia Ltd v Wellcome International Pty Ltd – Federal Court of Australia |  |
|---|--|
| Issue   | Revocation in unilateral contracts                                   |
| Facts   | Mobil said any dealer who performed at a set level for 6 years would |
|   | be given a franchise for 9 years at no cost. Mobil stopped this      |
|   | scheme so dealers could no longer claim this benefit.                |
| Held  | The revocation of the scheme was valid                               |
| Reasoning   | Any dealer who had not yet completed 6 years of performance had      |
|   | not completed the performance required for the contract to exist     |
|   | Vague and uncertain language 'we have more work to do', 'maybe'      |
| Ratio   | Can revoke unilateral contract after performance commences unless    |
|   | there is an implied promise not to revoke                            |

| Empirnall Holdings Pty Ltd v Machon Paull Partners Pty Ltd – NSW Court of Appeal |   |
|--|---|
| Issue  | Acceptance by silence in contract   |
| Facts  | Empirnall hired Machon to do work related to property development, and asked Machon to act as project manager, Machon |
|  | development, and asked Machon to act as project manager, Machon   |

|           | agreed. Machon sent a contract to Empirnall, then sent an email 'we are proceeding in understanding that the conditions of the contract are accepted by you'  |
|-----------|---|
| Held      | This was a valid contract   |
| Reasoning | A reasonable bystander would view Empirnall's silence as their acceptance of Machon's performance Empirnall had already benefitted from the offer McHugh: 3 step approach  1. Reasonable opportunity to reject offer 2. Takes benefit of it 3. Indicate they were to be paid in accordance with offer |
| Ratio     | Silence can be acceptance if the party does not object and continues to accept services with the reasonable expectation that those services need to be paid for   |

| Brambles Holdings v | Bathurst City Council – NSW Court of Appeal  |
|---------------------|--|
| Issue               | Is there agreement in these letters?   |
| Facts               | Contract for Brambles to manage Councils' solid waste disposal depot. Brambles started to receive liquid waste at the depot, charged for this and kept the money. Around this time, they enter into a 2nd contract that requires Brambles to pay the Council some profits from the acceptance of commercial waste.                 |
| Held                | ·  |
| Reasoning           | Apply global perspective rather than offer + acceptance The language of command is not compatible with requirements of an offer Heyden: Acceptance by manifestation of mutual assent or conduct  • If the traditional approach is not suitable, then it is relevant to ask: Can an agreement be inferred in all the circumstances? |
| Ratio               |  |

| Brikibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl House of Lords |  |
|--|--|
| Issue                                      | Postal acceptance rule   |
| Facts                                      | Brinkibon wished to purchase steel from Stahag, exchanges telexes throughout the course of negotiation, one of which accepted an offer from Stahag. Stahag did not perform this contract.              |
| Held                                       | The acceptance via telex did form the contract   |
| Reasoning                                  | 'the contract was made when and where the acceptance was received'   |
| Ratio                                      | If offeror indicates willingness to receive acceptance via telex, then the acceptance is valid once the telex is sent Acceptance is effective upon communication and receipt Not Applicable to emails? |